Rupee Records Strongest Monthly Gain Since February

On October 30, the Indian rupee recorded its highest monthly gain since February, strengthening to ₹94.95 against the US dollar from ₹95.26 the previous day. It gained around 1% in October, partly supported by RBI measures to curb dollar demand. EXPRESSION GAZETTE

The Indian Humiliation Ritual

I still remember my friend asking me "did you enjoy the rain" and I replied in a manner to not offend her (a rain lover). You see rain as a child was always magical , being part of a closed gated society one enjoys rain with friends and then have pakoras and sail paper boats in evenings. But something shifts as you grow old and go out of the gated society to be the part of the real society and that's when you start seeing rain in an ugly form, gutters jammed , potholes become ponds and roads transform into rivers. That's when you realise how an average Indian lives ,the ones that can't take work from home , who don't get paid sick leaves , the ones that can't sit in there "jor bagh ka ghar" and complain about the maid being late.

This is not the only instance where every minute of that person is drenched in humiliation. Some die because trees fell down, some due to curable diseases, and some due to the hollow administration of our country. An average Indian (non-elite) walks with slouched shoulders, head hanging and a deep contempt in the eyes. There is a systematic creation of people like these, an army of soldiers driven by survival. These people are the foundation of the economic labour pyramid and they are treated like cockroaches who spawn , live in the sewers and die,and will become a statistic. Nathupur is home to such cockroaches, they are the workers of the Millenium city who built those glass buildings and make sure they remain clean fothe rich to walk on. They share a small room with all of the family members, drinking water that looks sourced directly from Yamuna (oh wait it is) and use communal washrooms that have approx 40 real cockroaches at any given time and don't get me started on the roads during rain. Some still comment that it is because of their laziness that they remain at that level of income so it is understandable that they would get such amenities. So let's talk about an accomplished person , ...

EXPRESSION GAZETTE

...Pan Singh Tomar, an athlete and soldier who went on to win medals in multiple races. A disciplined soldier who took retirement to focus on family matters and when the situation got out of hand he took the route of law and order and appealed to civil servants and police to take action against the violence his family was subjected to, alas! In the end he had to take matters into his own hands and became a rebel "Baaghi". Pan singh was led down by the system and according to some reports humiliated by the police even after representing his nation and protecting it, this is not just a story of Pan Singh but many others who get no help but rather humiliation by our country's administration. This can't even be classified as bureaucratic apathy because even when some action can be taken according to the law the system is corrupt to a level that we are not even considered citizens.

Police and administration are not there to help the poor but to control them and safeguard the interest of the rich and powerful. Police brutality is a major concern in our country. In recent times the movie 'Satluj' highlighted this through the human rights violation that occurred in Punjab in 1995, where in order to follow the government orders of terrorism control the innocent citizens were murdered by Punjab police. Jaswant Singh Khalra , a mere Bank manager, challenged these murders and talked about it even on international platforms but at the end met with the same police brutality. You can understand the measure of cruelty by knowing that even his body wasn't found. This is not a cherry picked example but a sad and gruesome reality of our nation where being a mere labour, farmer, student and a middle class family is a curse and this is a curse that the people at top makes sure we remember every second of our life, we are reminded through lack of transportation, road , water, health, electricity, education and air, this is nothing but a lack of dignity to human life. We talk of big policy changes but the foundation of all of this lies in the shift of viewpoint on the part of the authorities where they start seeing us as citizens who deserve a better life.
